CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR TOPIC. What Will Real Friendship Do!" (I Saml. xx, 1-23.)

BY AMOS WELLS. It is necessary to say "real" friendship, since so much that is called by that preclous name is not friendship at all. As Sir Walter Raleigh sareastically wrote;

Some friends as shadows are, And Fortune as the sun; They never proffer any help

Till Fortune bath begun, Thomas Hughes defined friendship as "the power of going out of one's self and seeing and appreciating whatever is noble and loving in another man." Therefore a selfish man cannot know real friendship; he will not live in any life but his own. This does not mean that a real friend will carry out all his friend's desires, The more we love another, the more difficult it is to deny him anything, and the more certain we are to deny it if it is not best for him. Goethe puts the truth thus:

True friendship shows its worth in stern re-

At the right moment; and strong love sometimes

Heaps the loved one with ruin, when it serves

The will more than the weal of who demands.

The will more than the weal of who demands.

On the same principle, blame is sometimes a greater evidence of friendship than praise would be, as a man who fles a saw does more for it than the man who paints the handle. Yet many friendships fail for lack of praise; and that is one reason why God sends us friends, that we may have many chances to cheer them on with encouraging plaudits.

Another thing a friend does for a friend is to compliment him. Agassiz the zoologist, was a warm friend of Braun, the botanist. Each learned his friend's lore while he built up his own specialty. Friends should in this way be eager to share with one another the best and brightest they read, see or think. That is an exchange that doubles each life.

One of the best things a friend does for a friend is to sympathize with his thoughts, listen with interest to his opin-One of the best things a friend does for a friend is to sympathize with his thoughts, listen with interest to his opinions, and exult in his plans and achievements. This "heart and head hospitality," as Joubert calls it, is a vast comfort an inspiration on the lonely road of life. Licy Larconi neatly defines this function of friendship:

The best friend is an atmosphere Warm with all inspirations dear; The best friend is horizon, too, Lifting unseen things into view.

A friend will often make us or mar us in the view of the world. The Jewish legend says that when the starling first appeared in Jerusalem the rabbis could not tell whether it should be classed as a clean bird or unclean, for no other bird associated with it. At last there came a raven from Egypt, which claimed acquaintance with it; and since the raven was an unclean bird, the starling also was reckoned unclean. Such is the influence of friendship on reputation.

But, after all a friend can do, one relation is infinitely higher. General "Chinese" Gordon advised us to "leave men's love for God, taking him only. You will find that as you do so, men will like you; they will lean on you and trust you, and he will give you the spirit of comforting them."

So that the dearest word that Christ says to his diciples, the proudest and most en-nobling word, the word that means the most for our earthly relationships as well as the heavenly, is this: "I have called you friends."

IMPROVED ORGANIZATION FIXED.

Sunday Schools of Christian Church to Be Put on a Firm Basis. The first meeting of the National Bible School Board of the Christian Church came to an end last night at the First Christian Church, after the members of the body had definitely decided upon a plan to bring about a better organization and system in the Sunday schools of the and system in the Sunday schools of the denomination.

The final report of the board was written by C. P. Coler, D. N. Wetzel and W. E. Garrison, and was read by Mr. Garrison, It provided for the appointment of four committees, the names of which indicate their especial purpose. The committees are as follows:
